Lessons in the Art of Quilting

The Carolina Lily Quilt Workshop uses Deb Tucker's Wing Clipper Ruler

What makes quilting with Studio 180 principles and rulers so exciting?

Innovation in Traditional Quilt Construction

Traditional quilt construction has suffered from a reputation for having inaccessible, complicated blocks with limited creative opportunities. However, with her exciting new ruler series, Deb Tucker of Studio 180 Design is revolutionizing the art of traditional quilting. Based on the simple principle of making units larger and squaring them up, piecing traditional quilt tops has become easier and more precise.

Creative Potential You Never Thought Possible

Deb Tucker's rulers are also making traditional quilting more versatile, opening opportunities for creative design previously inaccessible to the novice quilter. With her broad comprehension of traditional quilting, colour theory, and piecing techniques Carla is uniquely qualified to facilitate your creative process using Deb Tucker rulers.

THE CLASS

In this "Tuckerized" version of a traditional Carolina Lily wall hanging, there are no "y"-seams to sew and no need for paper piecing. Quilters will learn to work with the Carolina Lily block using Deb Tucker's Wing Clipper 1 ruler and Studio 180 principles of making units larger and trimming to the exact size. With multiple techniques covered during this class, new design possibilities and exciting opportunities for creativity are opened once quilters master the primary construction methods. By the end of the class, quilters will be well on their way to completing the Carolina Lily wall-hanging.
